33-The absence of the editor must account for any omissions which may occur in this number.
We have commenced this week the publication of Dr. Duncan's speech, believing that we cannot better employ our columns. The way it shows up whiggery is a caution to Klay Koons.

CONGRESS.
On the 10th inst. the bill to amend and modify the tariff act of 1842, was taken up as the special order of the day. Mr. Elmer moved to lay the bill on the table; and the vote thereon was a test vote. The vote was then taken by yeas and nays, and the bill was laid on the table by a vote of 105 to 99. The following is the vote of the Ohio delegation:
Yeas.—Messrs. Florence, Giddings, Harper, Johnson, Schenck, Tilden, Vance, Yumeter and Vinton—all whigs.
Nays.—Messrs. Brinkley, Dean, Duncan, McCauslen, McDowell, Matthews, Morris, Potter, St. John and Weller—all democrats.
There are two vacancies in this State.

THE PHILADELPHIA RIOTS.

Philadelphia has again been visited with a most disgraceful riot, which, as we learn, was occasioned by a disturbance at a Native American Meeting. The riot lasted three days, and the destruction of life and property was immense. From ten to fifteen persons were killed, and many wounded.—Over sixty houses were burned, among which were St. Michael's and St. Augustine churches, the Catholic Seminary and two houses belonging to the Catholic clergy. The Saturday Post says:

"THE DAMAGES &c.
All is now—Friday P. M.—perfectly quiet. The damages of this outbreak cannot fall short of two hundred thousand dollars, and may exceed that sum. St. Augustine's church and buildings must have been worth, inclusive of the ornaments, at least fifty thousand dollars, and St. Michael's and the Seminary as much more.

Inquests have been held upon several of the persons killed. In all, verdicts are the same, death by hands unknown. How many of the Irishmen were killed, and how many lives lost in the fire, is unknown.

The following is a list of the killed and wounded.

KILLED.

John Shreeves, painter, shot through the head; died instantly.
George Stievel, rpe maker, southwark; ball entered his neck and passed through one of his lungs and the heart.
Louis Grable, stone cutter, Southwark; ball entered his right temple and passed out at the crown of the head, tearing off a portion of the scalp.
Wesley J. Rheindollar, shoemaker; ball entered his back at the right shoulder, traversed his body diagonally, and passed out at the left breast.
Wm. E. Hillman; ball entered at the right shoulder.
Joseph Rice, bullet entered his head and killed him instantly.
[Mr. Rice was not engaged in the affray, but had left his house a moment and was looking over the fence when the ball struck him.]
Matthew Hamitt, ball entered one of his ears, died instantly.
WOUNDED.
Henry Hesselbauch, tavern keeper, ball passed through the fleshy part of the hand.

James Whitaker, ball entered his right thigh and splintered the bone.

Charles Orte, shot with a slug in the head, the superior part of his skull is fractured.

George Young, bullet entered his left breast, and passed out of his back. He is probably dead; the wound is fatal.

Peter Albright, shot in the hand.

Willis H. Blaney, wounded in the foot, but not dangerously.

Augustus Peale, bullet entered his left arm above the elbow, and badly fractured it. The ball was abstracted and was perfectly flat.

Wright J. Ardis, ship carpenter, shot through the hip, dangerously wounded.

John Lusher, bullet entered his left breast, inflicting a mortal wound. He is probably dead.

John Taggart, shot in the forehead and badly beaten. Wounds and injuries mortal. He is probably dead.

Taylor, butcher, Southwark, struck by a spent ball in the eye, wound dangerous.

James Brown, broken leg, occasioned by running against a walling post.

A man who is unknown, had the patella or cap of the knee dislocated.

Washington Heyberger, badly wounded.

John Fagan, ball entered at the shoulder and passed out at the back.

Two boys were wounded in the abdomen, slightly, and we have heard of five men whose names we could not learn, who were wounded more or less dangerously.

The Post further says:

The scene during the conflagration is described in the report of the U. S. Gazette as awfully grand. A great sea of fire raged, the roaring noise of which was heard at a considerable distance, mingled with the crash of falling timbers or tumbling walls. People were hurrying hither and thither, anxiously endeavoring to save the property, and on the open lots adjacent, piles of furniture were heaped up promiscuously. Women and children made houseless by the destruction of their homes, were gathered in the vicinity, and the whole scene had its appropriate climax in the glitter of the arms and accoutrements of the soldiers, the cannon on their guards, and the dense and dark mass of people by which the whole square was hemmed in.

There is among the heart-rending scenes mentioned, one of most terrible interest spoken of by the reporter of the Ledger. It was the burial of an infant in the church-yard, while the church and adjoining buildings were in a blaze! The only funeral service which was performed over the grave, consisted of the brief and bitter ejaculations of the parents, accompanied by the crackling of the burning timbers of the church.

The reporter of the Time mentions many thrilling circumstances. At the Mayor's office of the Northern Liberties a beautiful girl was weeping at the loss of her brother, who was dying from wounds of the day before. He was the most abject picture of despair that could be imagined—screaming, tearing her hair; calling on the name of her brother, and venting curses most dreadful on the murderers. Farther up was met a woman and her son; the latter armed with a rifle—going to the scene of riot to avenge the death of a son and a brother. The poor woman was frantic with grief—the son spoke not, nor looked he any way except that which he was going. There was but one expression in every feature of his face—that was revenge.

The following is a description of the burning of St. Augustine's Church:

Doors were battered—but resisted the mob to the last. The windows were then broken. Boys were helped into the church with torches—squibs and fire works were thrown in; the glass pipe was broken, and though the fire seemed slowly to ignite at first the flames soon burst from the roof, and the sight was hailed by the mob with loud cheers.

While the mob were engaged, the City Troop made an ineffectual effort to disperse them. They dashed through the mob several times, but way was made for them, and the crowd instantly closed again each time. When the great clock in the steeple struck "ten," three cheers were given by the crowd, with the exclamation; "that is the last time you will strike." A few minutes past ten o'clock, the large gilt marble cross on the top of the steeple, fell to the street, clearing the building entirely, and struck the street without injuring any person.

At about twenty-five minutes past ten o'clock, the steeple fell with a tremendous crash, in a direct line down into the church. Shortly after this, the roof fell in and the heavens were then more brilliantly illuminated than ever, with the light. The fire continued to burn till nothing but the bare walls remained.

The dwelling of Dr. Moriarty in the rear, and a building occupied as a library and seminary both the property of the church, were suffered to burn, the firemen knowing the water would be cut off by destruction of the hose, if they played upon the church property. The contiguous houses, though scorched and disfigured, were not materially injured.

One of the most terrible features of this church burning was the awful silence of the mob. There were no shouts, except when the cross and steeple fell, and at one or two other points during the burning.

There was an undoubted intention to burn other churches, and indeed demonstrations were made against St. John's in thirteenth street. A regiment of artillery was upon the ground, and the mob was warned off by Gen. Cadwalder, who gave them five minutes to disperse; and they did so.

We have not room but for one other extract, which we make from the Globe of May 9th.

It seems that the lessons taught by the late bank, of plundering, shooting, and murdering with impunity in Philadelphia, have not been lost upon the classes whom it taught to set the laws at defiance.

It appears that the native Americans who are constituted, for the most part, of persons opposed to democracy, are visiting upon the poor Irish inhabitants of Philadelphia a reign of terror worse than that of the alien and sedition law. For three successive days, the Irish population in Philadelphia have been murdered in the streets; their houses burnt; and a number of inhabitants, with all their property, consumed in their dwellings; and their churches and seminaries given up to conflagration, in the madst of the military force drawn out to prevent it. We have not time nor inclination to comment upon the scene of horror.

CHRISTIANITY.

Christianity, like a child, goes wandering over the world. Fearless in its innocence, it is not abashed before princes, nor confounded by the wisdom of Synods. Before it the bloodstained warrior sheathes his sword, and plucks the laurel from his brow; the midnight murderer turns from his purpose, and like the heart-smitten deciple, goes out and weeps bitterly. It brings liberty to the captive, joy to the mourner, freedom to the slave, repentance and forgiveness to the sinner, hope to the faint-hearted, and assurance to the dying. It enters the hut of the poor and sits down with them contented in the midst of privations, and leaves behind everlasting bliss. It walks through great cities amid all their pomp and splendor, their imaginary pride and their unutterable misery, a purifying, ennobling, correcting and redeeming angel. It is like the beautiful companion of Childhood, and the comfort and support of age. It enables the noble, gives wisdom to the wise, and new graces to the lovely. The patriot, the priest, the poet and the eloquent man, all derive their sublime power from its influence. MARY HOWITT.

The Globe states that Mr. Wirt, who was wounded in the ball of the house; at representatives on Tuesday, suffered very much on Tuesday night and Wednesday from the wound. The ball did not go through his thigh bone, but struck the thigh bone and ran down it three or four inches, and then turned at so great an angle that a probe would not follow it. It is thought it made a curve around the thigh bone, and is lying against it.

Keep it before the people,—that in 1840 the federal whig party declared that the President's mansion was more splendidly furnished than that of any European potentate—and no sooner had they elected their Log Cabin President, then they voted an appropriation of six thousand dollars to add to the splendor of the same.

THE PRESS.—The sun of the moral world before whose unobstructed beams the lazy mists of ignorance, the clouds of superstition, and the pestilential mists of tyranny must eventually evaporate like the morning dew.

COMING TO THE POINT.—A young lady, while walking with a gentleman, stumbled, and when her companion, to prevent her fall, grasped her hand somewhat tightly, "Oh, sir," she simpered, "if it is come to that, you may ask my papa."

A good farmer is generally a good friend, an affectionate husband, an excellent father, and an honest man; and it is an established axiom that a well tilled farm denotes the supervision of an enlightened mind.

"What time is it Tom?"

"Just time to pay that little account you owe me."

"O, indeed, I did not think it was half so late!"

"The Fare's reduced," as the chap said ven he dined on a single cracker.

Minds ashamed of poverty, would be proud of affluence.

DIED.—In Franklin township, on the 7th inst. ELIZABETH, wife of THOMAS ORR.
